Poetry.

Love's Choice.

The stroller in the pensive field
Doth many a wildering glower descry;
Sometimes to him the Roses yield,
Sometimes the Lilies feed his eye;
Sometimes he takes delight in one,
Sometimes in all, sometimes in none.

But when, in dusky woodland ways,
He sees, beside some dreaming stone,
The fresh, untutored Violet raise
Her pleading eyes for him alone,
Then makes his heart its final choice,
And Nature speaks in Passion's voice.

The stroller beauty's garden through,
By many a wayward impulse led,
Sometimes is charmed by gold and blue,
Sometimes by brown and mantling red;
Sometimes proud dame and maiden small
Please just the same, or not at all.

But when, remote from pleasure's whirl,
He sees, at home's sequestered shrine,
The ardent, cheerful, guileless girl,
Of mortal mould, but soul divine—
Too good, too beautiful to know
How fair her worth and beauty show—

Then all his roving fancies pause,
Entraced by this o'erwhelming grace:
It rules him by celestial laws;
It lights a splendor in his face,
'Tis the best good that Heaven can give;
He wins it—and begins to live.

William Winter, in October Galaxy.

Selected Story.

Berthas Legacy or "More Blessed to Give than to Receive."

It was a night in the month of January, cold, dark, and wet. The wind blew in fitful gusts, and the rain and sleet fell in torrents. Cabs were flying in all directions, and straggling groops of men and women, homeward bound after their day's labor, hurried along deserted streets.

The boulevards, squares, and public thoroughfares of Paris, free from loungers and promenaders, wore an aspect of desolation that boded ill to the homeless poor.

In contrast to the inclemency out-of-doors, many happy families gathered closer around their glowing hearths, enjoying their comforts all the more that they were securely sheltered against the fury of the warring elements.

In the drawing-room of a splendid hotel, situated in a quiet quarter in the neighborhood of the Chaussee d'Antin, such a family was assembled.

A great fire shone and crackled in the chimney; gilt-bronze lamps, encrusted with enamels, shed a soft light throughout the apartment; a rich Gobelin carpet covered the centre of the bright-polished floor; and the elegant furniture and costly ornaments, artistically arranged, were so many convincing proofs of good taste and ample means. M. Constantin, in fact, was exceedingly rich, and proud, because he was the artificer of his own fortune. Upright and cautions in all his dealings, he, after many years of successful operations, skilfully, accomplished, found himself, at the head of one of the largest banking concerns in Paris, recognized as a sure guide in investments, and a competent authority in all things pertaining to finance. On the evening in question, M. Constantin was in excellent spirits. During the day, balance-sheet showing the result of the previous year's operations was presented to him, the profits being larger than on any former occasion, so that he was thoroughly disposed to indulge in the good-humor of a prosperous and self-satisfied man. Reclining in his easy-chair, he was surrounded by his romping children, who listened to his amusing stories, which they frequently interrupted with their merry peals of laughter.

At this moment, outside, a very different scene was to be witnessed. A lonely woman stood motionless before the door, the umbrella over her had protected her but slightly from the rain which streamed down her dress, forming a pool of warter at her feet. After some minutes' hesitation, she mustered courage and knocked at the door with a trembling hand. A servant opened it, and, requesting her to be seated in the antechamber, informed her master that a woman wanted to see him on urgent business.

"A woman! What woman? what does she want?" asked the banker.

"She did not seem willing to give her name, but looks respectable, and has come all the way from La Chapelle to see you."

"From La Chapelle, such a night as this? Poor woman!" said Madame Constantin. "Has she a carriage?"

"Oh no, ma'ame," replied the servant; "she has come on foot, and is drenched to the skin."

"Tell her to call at my place of business to-morrow," said the annoyed banker. "I cannot possible be disturbed at home."

On observing an expression of interest and compassion flit across the face of his eldest daughter Bertha, who was in delicate health, he changed his mind, and went to see what his visitor wanted.

After an absence of ten minutes, he returned, visibly out of temper, muttering something about the impertinence of intruders.

On being asked by his wife what the stranger wanted, he said:

"Oh, the husband of this Madame Renaud is a bookseller, I believe; he has been foolish enough to stand surety for his brother, who owes me a few hundred frances, and is consequently embarrassed. She pretends that Renaud is in bed sick, and cannot just now refund the amount, but wants me to accept it by instalments, which proposal I, of course, refused for one moment to entertain. I suppose she was trying to work upon my feelings when she told me that Renaud was threatened with consumption, that she had a small family to bring up, that times were hard, and so forth."

"You could not, then, grant her the favor she asked?" chimed in his wife.

"By no means. It would be entirely contrary to the rules of business to which I mean to adhere. But do not let us trouble ourselves about tho matter. Those people are always trying to impose upon the credulous, and generally pay when hard pushed. Come along, Bertha, give us a tune upon the piano to change the subject. What a stormy night this is?"

Bertha sat down at her father's desire; but while her back was turned to him an expression of sorrow clouded for a moment her pale face, and a tear fell upon the music-sheet in her hand. In her guiless simplicity she pitied the poor mother who had pleaded in vain for her sick husband and helpless offspring.

The charming Bertha sang, in a low sweet voice, full of expression, her father's favorite songs, accompanying herself on the piano, and restored him to his good humor.

He was proud of his accomplished child, and anxiously hoped that with the approach of spring her health would be re-established.

Poor Madame Renaud, on quitting the hotel, rapidly wended her way home through the storm, with a heavy heart, insensible both to cold and rain.

Resigning themselves to their lot, the Renauds witnessed their stock of books sold off at one-fourth of their value, the proceeds being barely sufficient to pay the rent falling due, and settled M. Constantin's claim.

Stripped of everything they possessed saving a bed, a table, and a few chairs, they removed to an attic in a wretched locality, and mingled with the poorest of the poor. Fertile in resources, like many other Frenchwomen, Madame Renaud girt up her loins for the struggle with want and misery. Being a skillful needlewoman, she sought work diligently, and found, and thought nothing of traveling all over Paris in quest of it. From dawn till dusk she was never idle, laboring in season and out of season without murmur or complaint, knowing that the lives of those near and dear to her depended on her efforts alone. On the miserable pittance so earned, the family were sparely provided with the bare necessaries of life. By continually imposing privations upon herself, her comely face grew pinched and wan, until she was scarcely recognizable. But the courageous woman's heart never fainted, and in the faithful discharge of her duty she found her best reward. To her husband, in a day of his prostration and affliction, she was a tower of strength; and her children rose up before her and called her blessed.

Summer came again, laden with fresh pleasure and beauties to gladden the heart of man. The bright sunshine, the green fields, the fragrant flowers, the hum of bees, the song of birds, the blating of sheep, and the bellowing of kine, were positive sources of enjoyment—delightful forms and sounds, grateful to eye and ear.

On the banks of the Marne stood a fine old chateau, surrounded with spacious walks and stately trees, to which M. Constantin had removed his daughter Bertha, in hopes that the change of air and scenery would ward off the fatal disease that was undermining her strength from day to day.

Her cough increased in intensity with her weakness through the long summer and autumn months, and M. Constanin despaired of his darling's life. Human skill and wealth were powerless to arrest the march of the grim destroyer, and the sweet resignation of the suffering maiden was painful to be hold.

To escape the early chills of winter, the family proceeded to Nice, hoping against hope that Bertha's health might be restored. A hectic flush occasionally suffused her pale face, as she looked upon the magnificence of Nature—the fertile valleyes, the hoary mountains, the waying forest, the sounding sea.

Her eye of preternatural brightness looked as if kindled with the light of a purer life, while her uncomplaining gentlness would have touched a heart of stone. Her heart-broken parents now bent over her night and day, smoothing her pillow, and comforting her in her last hours.

"Father," she said, "do you remember the poor woman who sought you that stormy night and pleaded for her husband and children?"

"I do, Bertha."

"Please give her the hundred-franc note that I got from Uncle Eugene on my last fete-day, which you will find in my work-box."

"I will, my child."

In the early dawn of next morning, she said: "Father, mother, embrace me. I cannot see you. I feel we shall not be long together; but we will meet again."

A few minutes afterwards she breathed her last, and her spirit of innocence and purity winged its flight to the realms of peace.

The iron had now entered into the soul of the prosperous banker, and he for once realized the frailty of human nature and the vanity of worldly hopes and desires. A link was now wanting in the family chain, and Bertha's vacant chair was a perpetual souvenir of their loss. The father's face assumed a careworn look, and the mother's an expression of sadness. Years afterward, however, when resigned to their bereavement, they looked back with tender interest to the sweetness of Bertha's life, and fondly dwelt upon the qualities that made her memory fragrant.

In midwinter, M. Constain, in deep mourning, was wending his way toward La Chappelle Saint-Denis, in quest of the Renauds. Their shop was occupied by a wine-merchant, who knew nothing about them. A grocer in the neighborhood informed him that they were most respectable people, and had been brought to misery through the hard-heartedness of an exacting creditor. After much searching, he finally discovered their address, and recognized Madam Renaud on the staircase before him, sadly altered, however, since he first saw her, He slowly followed her up six stairs to a narrow attic, and listened in the doorway. A racking cough plainly told what the matter was with the occupant of the bed.

"The lady I sewed so much for has not paid me, and tells me to call next week. What we must do, God only knows. I have neither fire nor food."

And her children cried for bread, while she had none to give them. A tear rolled down the banker's cheek, and he turned on his heel and rapidly desended the staircase.

On reaching the street, he proceeded to a restaurant, and ordered a savory dinner to be sent up to the Renauds. Shortly afterward, a smart boy, carrying a heavy basketful, went whistling up the same staircase, and knocked at their door

Words cannot depict the astonishment of the forlorn family on receiving this unexpected supply, nor the happiness that reigned that night in the miserable garret.

When they had finished their, repast, and were still speculating about it, M. Constanin walked in, and explained the motives of his visit. Bertha's legacy, with something added to it, he placed in Madame Renaud's hands, while to the poor broken-down bookseller he presented a check on the Bank of France for ten thousand francs, telling him he was to accept it as a loan for which he would only charge him with interest at the rate of two and a half per cent. per annum, until he was able to refund the amount.

Prosperity again dawned upon the poor Renauds, who had been so sorely tried; and the medical skill which failed to saved Bertha restored the old bookseller to health and strength.

M. Constantin, after the accomplishment of his mission of mercy, felt how much more blessed it is to give than to receive, and went down to the Chaussee d'Antin with a light heart and a good conscience.

His charity, which began at this period of his life did not end here. Wherever human suffering was to be alleviated, he was sure to be one of the most generous and unostentations contributors. So numerous have been the benefits bestowed by him upon the well-deserving in adversity that he is now, in his green old age, beloved and respected as "the poor man's friend."

Evenings at Home No 3.

BY HECLA HOLLYWOOD.

Daylight, as if weary and in disgust with the unceasing trouble of restless and ungrateful man has retired in all the splendor of purple and gold, to brighten another sphere; even while we look, the wings of night droop over us, leaving only a window in the west framed by the last rays of the now invisible sun. Some one has well said that "the setting sun reminds us of the declining year," they might have added that closing day reminds us of waning life.

While darkness falls thus in feather-like silence around us, we watch eagerly the crowded streets, every one is "going home," going, some to meet smiling happy faces and to find a cordial welcome around the fireside, where loving chidings shows him how much they miss him. Others to a fireride of misery, squalor and poverty, added to which not a word of cheer or sympathy is breathed, not a look, save of bitter reproach for his perhaps unavailable story. A third class perhaps go home to find a "vacant chair" from which the idol of his heart has been but recently taken.

Ah! do we not see the look of settled anguish in his face? How his lips quiver and his eyes fill with tears when he hears her name called. His whole frame is convulsed with grief as he nears the gate and sees the light burning cheerfully within and knows that she is not there.

Hark! what is that he hears? her voice, ah, no, it cannot be, for that voice is silent in the cold cruel grave, he will hear it no more until the angel of death summons him "up there" then methinks hers will be the first soug to welcome him, hers the first hand he grasps.

Still there is another class, who wander aimlessly about, asking charity, or it may be begging to sleep on the handsome steps of some palatial residence, only to be refused. No home, can those who are surrounded by all the appliances of wealth comprehend that sentence.

Shall we ask them to explain it? No indeed, they know not its force, go rather to that miserable looking blind begger, lead by that little dog, ask him—Methinks I hear him say, tis to want sympathy, comfort, attention and everything that adds to human happiness. I have no home, and "no one to love," there is not one in all this crowded city or the great wide, wide world who is not as near and dear to me as another. The last one in whose veins my blood coursed has long since gone to join the innumerable caravan, that await you and I on the other shore. And I sir, am

"Only waiting for the boatman
Soon he'll come to bear us over,"

I ask what lesson do we learn from this? Tis that philosophers stone, contentment.

That object of pity just described, is content, though he has not where to lay his head. He sees the hollowness of earthly pleasures, beauty and their falseness too. Does some one say that he is simply submissive.

Admitting that he is, there is something to admire, for he submits cheerfully, never refering to the happy past except when the waves of circumstances break unusually rough around his weather beaten craft. It is then, and only then that the music of the past steals over him, sweeter far than ever woke nymphs of old; which is but a faint echo of the celestial choir which is bending low over the battlements of heaven anticipating his arrival.

Watch him yet, his already feeble frame totters so, it cannot be, yes, he is lying down, his bed the comfortless earth, his pillow like Jacob's of old, a stone, Israel like, to wrestle with his God for deliverence from this mortal bondage. Hover near him ye ministering spirits, soothe him with thy lightest touches, drive all dark clouds from his sight, banish the world and its sinful temptations, let him depart in peace.

Oh degraded world, thy applause and condemnation are alike, of no importance to him, your fleeting show of friendship is "weighed in the balance and found wanting."

See! he turns him away in disgust from the mass of corruption, to a scene of unsurpassed lovliness, heavenly beauty.

He is dying! They upon the battlements of heaven lean lower, still lower to watch his shortning breath. Dying! dead! Hark "I hear the angels sing," they come to bear him away triumphantly home. Yes, he has gone

"Up where the walls of jasper,
Shut in the streets of gold,
And where the whitewinged angels
Live but never grow old.
There amid the towers of Eden,
And along the crystal stream,
He will wander and worship,
With the loved ones gone before."

Yes, the long lost, the loved of his youth will be the first to greet him there, that bridge, of a single span, reaching from the confines of time to the shores of eternity, he has crossed. No one misses him here, the great tide of humanity will swell and surge around him and over, tomorrow the world will move on as usual, for "when beggars die no comets are seen," yet there is one more to swell the song of praise around his throne, one more to pray unceasingly for the erring here below.

Here beneath the silent stars he breathed his life away, with no human hand to wipe the death dew from his forehead, no whispered word to comfort him. He is even burried in his rags, but does he wear them there? Is he called "blind" begger there? No, his rags and filth he left on earth, he now wears a "robe of rightousness," and sits down in the Kingdom with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, all inhabitants of the spirit land.

While I thus soliliquize, I am following the begger hurridly, for time is escaping, the summer is almost over, the harvest is nearly ended, and since we last saw the sun, many have like the begger, died, but unlike him do not wear the robe of holiness, they cry lost! lost!

And methinks I hear the echo borne on the wings of the night winds through these quiet streets loud enough to wake every one who is not yet "satisfied."

Miscellaneous.

Marriage—Home—Children.

The Rev. Dr. Scudder, in taking his farewell of the Californians, gave them a lecture on Home and its kindred joys, wherein some excellent truths were brightly said:

Twenty-seven years ago a Yankee girl and I resolved to make a home. I have heard it said that in all such agreements the lady takes the initiative—not verbally, but in some gentle revelation palpable to lovers. My wife and myself have often disputed that point. She says the assertion is groundless and malicious; and I think she is right. I made the advance, and was considerably frightened; but she helped me bravely through it. The family rises in dignity and purity as marriage is held sacred. I think that if we could compile a chapter on the honor in which men treat their wives, we should have a most curious history. In ancient Babylon all the women were every year put up at auction. The handsome ones went off at high prices, and the money that was realized was offered for doweries upon ugly ones If a man got a beauty he paid for her; if he got an ugly woman he got cash. They endeavored to set loveliness without money against homeliness with it. In Greece the bride went by night in a chariot to the house of her intended. In another ancient country the women had a fashion of kicking and biting those who endeavered to take them away; although I am inclsned to think these kicks and bites did not amount to much. In Dahomey the King owns all the women, and takes as his proportion three thousand. Once a year he parcels out all the rest of the women in his empire to his subject just as he pleases, without consulting their wishes. There are still lower depths than this. In some tribes the man fells the woman senseless to the ground and bears her away. Where man has sunk thus low we may well class them below the ourang-outang. Even these homes are better than no homes. They are better than a wholly unregenerated intermingling. Yet none of these is like to that home which is a product of Christian civilization; in which woman is honored in the sharing of the purest and noblest rite, the rite of marriage, based upon mutual affection, the ceremony of wedlock being the vow of fidelity and love. Marriage began in Eden, and it should be kept up. In the Roman Empire there were stringent laws against bachelors. In Greece women took switches and beat the old baches in order to whip a matrimouial spirit toin them.

A complete idea of home can never be realized without children. They are a part of ourselves. We break out with children just as rockets that shoot up break out into stars. Man is a stick and paper filled with niter and charcoal sulpher, but he does not break out into stars of himself. Parental instinct is the great foundation of the family tie. In the lower order of animals this does not exist. The tadpole never knows his father or mother. These dear little pollywogs grws up without care or father or mother. The honey-bee has good mathematical skill and

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

It was always a grave question with Abolitionists, in the days of slavery, as to what would be the status of the colored people, and what disposition would be made of them in the event of their emancipation. It was the favorite theory of the Pro-slavery Northerners, that as soon as the manacles were stricken from the slaves, they would swarm to the North, and overrun that country like a horde of vandals, coming in contract with northern laboring men, and generally upsetting the whole labor system. That ignorant of the principle of true freedom, and without moral or intelectual culture; having no knowledge of their own just rights, and no regard for the rights of others, they would be incubuses in society, filling the jails and penitentiaries, and carrying terror and destruction in their wake. But while the people were canvassing and agitating this question, and wiseacres were prognosticating the result, the problem was suddenly presented to us in a tangible practical form, and the war's close showed us over four million people quickly brought from the darkness of abject slavery, to the light of civil and political freedom. As the bark which suddenly founders at sea leaves its living freight struggling in the dreary waters, clutching at whatever may float within their reach upon which they may buoy themselves, so, the sudden foundering of the institution of Slavery left these four millions of human beings drifting and struggling upon the great civil sea, without compass or pole star; and, as a mere act of humanity, some passing ship stands by, and lowers its boats to aid, and save the shipwrecked, so did many of the good people of our country stretch forth their hands to aid and save the no less shipwrecked African.

There were many serious obstacles in the way of this mission of mercy. The feeling of repugnance against the negro as a representative man viewed in the light of manhood, growing within us and taking root, its principle being almost coeval with our very existence, exerted a repelling influence on many who otherwise would be entitled to the name—Pilanthropist. The relative difference between the white and black race, the fact of the almost universal ignorance and degradation of the latter, and the complete social ostracism to which they were subjected in all parts of our country, had brought us unconsciously to the belief, that they were an inferior race by nature, placed upon the earth to fill the place of hewers of wood, and drawers of water, and the idea of giving them social and political equality with the whites was peculiarly obnoxious. This feeling was scarcely more bitter in the South, than in many parts of the North. The repugnance against the negro, as a simple being, was perhaps less in the South, where the two races had been brought up together from infancy, than in the North; but the Southern people directed all their repugnance and malice against the negro as an element of power, and as a representative citizens. But the fact stared us in the face, that the colored people were free; made so by a power which acknowledged no superior, and by a decission from which there was no appeal. The wise and prudent men who were conducting our National affairs, early acknowledged the fact that no man can by law be half a slave and half a freeman. His freedom must be entire, or else his bondage must be complete and abject. Not only must the law rivet the gyves upon them, but the intelectual part must be bound in the stronger chains of darkness and ignorance. A little learning in the slave, is a very dangerous thing to the master. This the slave owners of the South well knew, and upon this principle they ever acted during all the years of Slavery. As the avenues of learning were opened to the colored people by the very act of emancipation, and knowing that many of them would drink at the fountain of knowledge and soon know the extent of the rights guaranteed to free citizens of our country, and that they would not only claim these rights, but would fight to gain and maintain them, our wise Rulers and Legislators removed all civil and political obstructions from out their way, and admitted them to the full rights of citizenship. Although many of the perils of an opposite policy have been avoided by these acts of National wisdom, still not all the danger has been averted. As the safety of a slave nation consists in the ignorance and degradation of its bondmen. So the safety of a free country consists in the intelligence, and enlightenment of its freemen. The Education of the masses is the safeguard of civil and political freedom. These four million negroes are poor and ignorant. They have never been taught to depend upon themselves for anything, but have been educated to rely upon others for everything. They passed through no course of training to fit them for the great boon which they have received, but their freedom has been thrust upon them, and like an ignorant impecunious man suddenly raised to great wealth, they find their recent possessions almost an incumbrance. They know and care very little about the benefits of an education, but we all know that they must be educated, and brought up to a better and purer standard of manhood. That they must be inducted into a knowledge of their rights and duties as American citizens, or they will be dangerous to the community, a class too free to ever be slaves again, and yet too unenlightened to enjoy true freedom. The idea of social equality is too trifling and contemptable to merit a passing notice; yet let us pause to say that society always regulates and conducts its own social affairs, without the aid or interferance of the civil law, so far as it relates to its gradation, and social intercourse. We have no reference to the social status of the colored race; but we recognize in them an element of power for good or evil, and for our own sakes and for theirs, and for the sakes of our children let us stimulate them to greater exertion, and help them to come "out of the depths." into the places which God designed from the first they should occupy.

THE HEIGHT OF IMMAGINATION

A true story founded on fact, and respectfully dedicated to all our friends without regard to Race, Color, or Previous Condition.

CHAPTER I.

Prologue.

My dear Patrick Kilpatrick, I am in receipt of your letter in which you request me to write you what I consider an illustration of the greatest height to which immagination can attain. You say, "You once heard of a man who set his coat tail on fire, leaped out of a third story window, and immagined himself a comet." This certainly shows a firtility of immagination, but is nothing to the sad "tail" I am about to relate.

CHAPTER II.

The Story.—Oh! my.—(Mark Twain.)

Less than one short year ago, in the far off county of Pasquotank, a poor little "weekly," sickly, scrawny child was born, and launched into this cold unfeeling world. It was almost an orphan from birth, having only a poor old dilapidated fossil of a woman, for a mother, who had published and sworn its paternity on twelve different men, scattered over the whole Albemarle region, who refused to recognize the bastard offspring. There was living in the same town, a kind, well established old dame, who, taking pity on the little ragged, dirty foundling, deserted by its "natural" protectors, took it to her home, clothed and fed it until she thought it was old enough to "run alone," when, with many a kind word and admonition, she let it go out to "paddle its own canoe." But being still under the direction and control of its maternal antediluvian, who had been dead for the past quarter of a century, but was still walking around to save funeral expenses, (fact) it soon paddled its canoe ashore, and again found itself ragged, dirty and hungry, out of funds, and deserted by those who were responsible for its existence. In its distress, it again went to the kind old dame, who, although of another "tribe," took the poor wanderer to her heart, again supplied its wants, gave it some character, and suffered it to live almost within the shadow of her own domicil. The kind dame watched the little struggling—"thing" with anxious solicitude, for she early saw that the sins of the parents had been visited on the offspring. and it was a fool. Although morally certain that this infant was totally unable to succeed in any undertaking requiring brains, yet she lent it her aid, sent it "food" when hungry, and poor, and in every way showed herself a christian philanthropist.

CHAPTER III.

"If anybody says this isn't so, he is a villain and a liar."—[H. G.]

There came a war between the tribe to which this old dame belonged, and the infant's tribe; and the putative fathers of the late outcast, seeing they could make some use of it, rallied to its support. Those who had stood aloof from the ragged foundling, now came forward to welcome it, and gave it pennies with which to buy gingerbread and peanuts, and patted it on the head, and told it it was a smart child and looked like THOMAS JEFFERSON, and HORACE GREELEY, or any other man, and the Ancient old "Spirit of '76" cuddled it in her withered old arms, and said it was Granny's own baby, so it was, and old GRANT or BLUEBEARD or any other "d——d Radical" shouldn't have it, so they shouldn't, and all this so puffed up this infant, that it thought it was the biggest and wisest thing on earth. In fact it was like the louse on the elephant's back; it thought it was the elephant itself.

CHAPTER IV.

"If you have tears to shed prepare to shed them now."—[Shakespeare.]

Well, Patrick, my boy, the saddest part of my story remains to be told. Forgive this weakness, for "my tears wood shed" This poor little "orphling," that had soared upon the eagle's wing, immagined itself an eagle, and it actually got so elated because its friends and twelve (12) fathers, who forsook it at its birth, came to welcome it, that it wouldn't notice its kind old friend, but spoke disrespectfully of her, and called her "The old woman around the corner," and the kind old dame felt so badly at this ingratitude, that she fell right down and died—she did.

[15 minutes intermission for hot coffee.]

MORAL.—Don't trust an orphan whose mother is over one hundred and fifty years old, and who has twelve (12) living fathers, for they may return and claim their offspring, and the child may —although a fool—become so much of an Economist, as to cull a little immagination from its surroundings, which, opperating on its weak head, may so puff itself up, as to make it an ingrate, and cause you to mourn that you ever performed an act of kindness toward it.

THE END.

EDITORIAL TALK WITH THE READER.

FARMS AND FARMING,—(No. 1.)

Plain simple facts can sometimes be best illustrated, and plain duties can be best inculcated by dealing in metaphor, but there are themes which at once rob language of hyperbole, and demand to be presented in plain words. Of such a class, is the subject on which we wish to talk with you to-day; and we have no excuses to make for discussing this theme under this head, for while all our readers are not farmers, yet, while they continue to eat bread and hominy, and enjoy their bacon and "steak," they are all interested in the question of farming. More than this, agriculture forms one of the principal resources of our National wealth, and we have a patriotic interest in this question. To the farmer, this primarily comes up as a mere investment, and question of dollars and cents. He does not look beyond, to see what influence, good, or bad, farming may have on the National Exchequer. The only problem presented to him is—how can I best farm my land to bring in the largest possible returns; and many, many fale in the solution of this question. We err principally through our short sightedness, for we deal with our farms, in a manner different from our dealings with any other thing from which we expect a return. We feed ourselves, and our hired help, that we, and they may have strength to do the labor required of us. Our horses, and other beasts of burden, are treated in the same way, for the like reason. We expend money in provisions, and give them to our cows, that they may return an interest on the investment, in milk, butter and cheese. We feed our swine, that they may yield us their pork and lard, and thus do we deal with everything upon the farm, save the land. Here our theory of "give and take" flies off in a tangant, and our wits go a wooling. We plow our land and plant the seed, and leave all the duty of nourishing to Nature. The most ignorant farmer knows that the growing grain drinks up the "producing elements" of the soil, and yet, because the soil has recuperative properties, they suffer crops to be taken off the land at each successive season, without giving it a particle of nourishment. Why not treat your cattle in that way? True they would die—but then you would have less expense, and their hides would sell for something. Is this true economy? which is the best plan, to skin your land every year, allowing it only the small pension which nature annually gives it, and get two barrels of corn to the acre, or to manure and fertilize your farms and get five barrels, or more to the acre,

Let us give you two rules which we believe you ought to observe.

1st. Bring your land up to its fair producing capacity, by the use of fertilizers.

2nd. Never take from your land, in the shape of crops, any more of the producing qualities, than nature will restore, unless you supply the deficiency yourselves.

Fat land, like fat cattle, is the easiest kept; poor land like poor stock, is about as much trouble as it is worth.

WM. H. SEWARD.

A great man is dead, and the nation mourns. A fellow being has yielded up his spirit to the God who gave it, and returned his body to its kindred clay. Death is no stranger, and his visits, except to our immediate circle, causes scarcely a passing notice. Our fellow travelers are falling all around us as the leaves fall from the trees in autumn, but we heed it not. But occasionally a man dies, and the sound thereof comes to our ears like the falling of the mighty oak in the stillness of the forest. Even so was it a few days since when our distinguished fellow citizen whose name heads this article, bade adieu to time, and entered the ever widening circle of eternity. His, has been a busy, eventful life, and his name is indelibly written on the pages of American history. With his cold remains we bury all his human foibles, and remember only his goodness, and emulate only his greatness. Let the mantle of christian charity descend and cover all his public and private errors, and let us believe that "After life's fitful fever he sleeps well,"

WHISTLING TO KEEP THEIR COURAGE UP.

It was not only admitted by the Democrats "that as Pennsylvania went so would the Union go," but that it was absolutely necessary that they should carry at least one of the three great States at the October election. Now that they have lost them all, it would naturally be expected that they would retire into their hole, and draw the hole in after them. But no, like BANQUO's Ghost, they refuse to down. They are like the Ghost in another particular, for being without substance the only office they perform is to scare old women and children. But GRANT will exorcise all such "spirits." Meanwhile the Republican jubilation goes on, and we say to our adversaries in the former language of the Ghost, "List oh! list."

Our friends on the other side are at their old game of figuring victory ont of defeat. They have got a big job on hand but no doubt will succeed to their own satisfaction.

"Victory, Victory in the air
Victory, Victory everywhere."

REPUBLICANISM TRIUMPHANT.

"HAND CLASPING" WITH MONGRELS PLAYED OUT.

"Let the Whangdoodle mourn."

How are you Horace Greeley
Does your mother know you're—Beat.

And keep the news from "Horace."*

"ANY MAN WHO SAYS I AM A CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT IS A THIEF AND A LIAR,—H. G."

"ALL DOWN BUT ONE—SET THEM UP ON THE OTHER ALLEY."

Ho! sound the tocsin from the tower
And fire the culverin,
Bid every Freeman come with speed
Call all our party in.
Up with our banner on the wall
The banquet board prepare,
Throw wide the portals of the hall
That all our feast may share.

REPUBLICAN MAJORITIES.

Pennsylvania,	30,000.
Ohio,	16,000.
Indiana,	5,000.
Nebraska,	5,000.
District of Columbia,	6,000.

Well! "you know how it is yourself" now, "Everything going to rack and ruin;" —A Tyrant in the chair for four years more. Oh! my-hi, what a rumptibus, what a rinktibus, what a row. "No accounting for tastes" you know,—Some prefer theirs "straight," and some like "mixed drinks;" but it isn't very strange that so many declined ipecac in theirs. Frauds.—certainly, terrible frauds,—If you want to know how great, read the Tribune, or that mouth-organ of Democracy, the New York Sun, which like the male hen, never sets. Oh! when will the ballot in Pennsylvania, and the West be pure and unspotted as it is in Georgia. Echo answers (———). Good bye "Honest HORACE," you have "fit" and "fit," and got licked, now retire to your corner and get spunged off. We are sorry for you; no man has done more, or made greater "sacrifices" than you have. Republicans hate you—Democrats despise you. There is no vacancy in the Tribune office for you. We would say to you, "go West young man go West," but that's couutry has gone back on you. Nothing remains for you but to retire to the shades of Chappaqua. Go there and while away your time in writing "what you know about" getting beat. Adieu.

SHAMEFUL.

We learn from the Raleigh News of the 11th inst., that about 1 o'clock A. M. of that day the office of the Raleigh Sentinel was blown to pieces destroying the press and fixtures. The building was mined, and destroyed by powder. This was a shameful outrage. We admire JOE TURNER as a man and politician, as little as any man living, but we denounce any such a cowardly way of paying any kind of a "debt." Give us an adversary who will meet us face to face and say "defend yourself," but deliver us from the cowardly sneak who will fire at the back of our head or destroy our building, because of some malice that he may have against us. We hope the perpetrator of this crime will be apprehended and brought to justice.

The Democrato—Liberal Republicano —Anything to beat Grant—oh! O! Party, insists on trying to believe that the Republican majorities in the West are sure indications of the continuing hatred of the North toward the South. If this belief does them any good, perhaps it were unwise to undertake to undeceive them on this point, but the fact claimed is untrue. They say they took GREELEY—a Northern man and Republican, as a Pacifier, thereby meeting the North half way. True they took the man Greeley, but not the Republican Greeley. They took him after he had divested himself of every Republican garment he had ever worn, and had otherwise disguised himself so as not to be recognized by his old friends. GREELEY as he now stands at the head of the Mongrel Party, is not a representative Northerner, or a representative Republican. He has renounced his allegance to that party, and sworn fealty to the other side, and we fight him as we would any other Democrat. But why claim that the Republican Party is more sectional than the Democratic Party? Havn't they both their earnest supporters in the North and South? Are Southern Republicans disloyal to the South and Northern Democrats disloyal to the North? Such must be the inevitable conclusion from the premises. But let the Galled Jade of Mongrelism wince, the people will continue to vote as they please, the right will prevail and Grant will be elected; mark that.

Correspondence.

From Dare County.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

Sanderson Paine, of Chickamacomico Dare County, aged 73 years, was married to his grand-daughter, Rebecca Stowe, aged 16 years, during the month of August last. Last February he applied to B. B. Daily Esq., of Hatteras to marry him, but Mr. Daily refused to marry him to his grand-daughter. He made a similar application to A. W. Simpson Jr, in June, but he too refused to marry him. So in August he took the girl and went into Currituck County where he obtained License and was married by some Justice of the Peace in that County.

Mr. John C. Simpson of Hatteras was badly stung by a fish, while fishing a dragnet in the neighborhood of Hatteras Inlet on the 22nd of September, the sting of the fish was about eight inches long and passed through the top of his left foot just under the Skin, inflicting a painful, though not dangerous, wound. He was carried ashore immediately, and his foot placed in pork brine as hot as he could bear it, which soon took the poison out of the wound. He is now doing very well.

DEATH OF MR. SEWARD.—HOW HIS LAST MOMENTS WERE SPENT.

Washington, Oct. 11.—Just after the effusion from his lungs yesterday, and thinking it would relieve his breathing, he was, at his own desire, placed upon a lounge and bolstered up and moved from his adjoining bedroom into his study, where, in the midst of his books and his literary and other papers and surrounded by his relatives and a few friends and all his devoted dependents, he breathed his last. For the last hour of his life, as the powers of nature were giving way, his condition became easy and he spent the time in affectionate leave-takings of his relatives and dependents, and finally sank quietly to his last rest as if going to sleep.

Seward had tention ague with catarrhal complication and muscular palsy. Mr. Seward's intellectual faculties were clear and vigorous to the last, save when disturbed by a paroxysm of fever.

Madrid, Oct. 11.—The Carlists continue their agitation in Catelonia, where several have been arrested, including some soldiers on furlough. No further news from Ferrol. The Capitol is perfectly tranquil.

A dispatch from Ferrol, received in Madrid late last night, says insurrectionist made two attacks on the frigate Asterias Friday, but in both instances were speedily repulsed by the crew. Three Government vessels are blockaking the entrance to the harbor Ferrol, and it is impossible for any of the captured by the rebels to get out. Anarchy prevails in the insurgent band and it is believed the insurrection will be overthrown by the first attack of the Government troops.

THREATENED ANTI-CATHOLIC DISTURBANCE IN IRELAND—PRINCE NAPOLEON NOT ALLOWED TO RESIDE ON FRENCH SOIL.

London, Oct. 11.—Additional military and constabulatory forces have been ordered to Sisburn, Ireland, where an anti-Catholic disturbance is threatened.

Prince Napoleon has received official notice from the French Government that he will not be permitted to visit France or take up his residence on French soil, as has been reported he intended to do.

TERRIBLE SHOOTING AFFAIR IN SAVANNAH.

Savannah, Oct. 11.—A terrible shooting affair occured here to-day. A young man named Alex. Dillon shot his father, David R. Dillon, three times, inflicting only flesh wounds, and then killed himself.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE—500 MEN THROWN OUT OF EMPLOYMENT.

St. Louis Oct. 11.—The extensive and new furnace of the Lamott Lead Company, at Frederickton, Mo., was burned yesterday. Loss $250,000, and five hundred men are thrown out of employment.

The idea that one man can carry the vote of a State in his breeches pocket, was probably entertained until a late hour on Tuesday evening by Ex-Gov. Curtin, of Pennsylvania. The Greeleyites had flattered him into this belief—the Tribune had overwhelmed him with abject fawnings, and Mr. Curtin undoubtedly thought that he was the head of the Republican Party. Once more the lesson has been taught which politicians are so slow to learn—that politicians and newspapers are only powerful so long as they truely faithfully, and candidly represent public opinion. When a man has performed this duty for some time, he occasionally is deluded into the idea that he is the public—that all the world well follow him. The latest victim to this delusion is Andrew G. Curtin, who owed his position entirely to the Republican Party, and took the first opportunity which presented itself of dealing a treacherous stab at that party and its chiefs. We doubt whether the applause of the Greeleyites and Copperheads will compensate him for this betrayal of his principles and his friends.—N. Y. Times.

A DRUG STORE WORTH SEEING!

To the Editor of the North Carolinian

During a recent visit to your little City I was among other things attracted by the new Drug Store of Dr. J. N. BUTT, No. 75 Road Street, and I cannot resist the impulse to ask your readers to call and see it, as it is not surpassed by any you will meet in the South, not in Baltimore will you find one more elegantly fitted up except its deficiency in gas lights which the Doctor hopes to supply soon. It is a two story brick building, 65 by 27 feet, with dwelling above. The lower story is divided into Dispensing Room, Office, Ware Room and Laboratory. The Store Room is very light. The front being entirely of plate glass, nine pieces 90 inches long, with two doors and one window, glass 56 x 90. The doors being double, shut one upon the other, and when open, as in summer, are folded back into a recess to the wall, making a straight line with the door and an elegant finish. The doors and flanges to the same being of plate glass, 90 inches long, does not impede the light open or shut. The floor is almost even with the pavement and is covered with a carpet of cocoa matting. There are two counters on either side, 12 feet long, beautifully white splendidly finished, and of good design with Italian marble tops. Their ends 8 feet from the doors, pass at right angle to the wall. On the right hand one is a Tennessee Marble Fountain, and on the other an Aquarium of Gold and other Fish. On either side between the door and counter, is a fine silver mounted walnut Show Case, 5 feet high, fastened to the wall, a beautiful and attractive ornamens to display Fancy Articles, and in the rear a Poison Case of the same kind. Three fine silver mounted and one plate glass Prescription Case, with scroll and clock on top, and one fine balance scale adorn the counters. There are over 120 drawers which make a fine display, they are of sweet gum varnished, which is the prettiest wood that could be used. The shelves are supported on iron brackets, at the terminus of which, 3 feet from the ceiling, is a snow white cornice, interlined with two istrips of gilt moulding. The wall and entire store is pure white except the drawers and when lighted presents a very imposing display

Last but not least, is the "little jewel" of an office, which is so much needed by every business man. The Doctor is doing, as he tells us, an extensive and lucrative office practice. It is fitted up in fine style, with every modern necessity, and examinations are made with as much privacy as in your own home. The Laboratory is not yet finished, but when done will be a very responsible part of the establishment. The Doctor keeps a large stock of goods pertaining to the Drug Trade.

The money necessary to pay in full all the offered gifts is now upon deposit in the Farmer's and Drovers' Bank, as will be seen by the following certificate of the Cashier:

FARMERS' AND DROVERS' BANK.

THIS WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

We call attention to the following new advertisements in this issue.

Swamp Lands for sale.
A Valuable Farm for Sale.
Pankrupt Notice.

Local and Personal.

☞Nights just cool enough to sleep.

☞The weather is truly magnificent.

☞We have had our first frost—a slight one.

☞Read the interesting story on our second page.

☞The hum of the busy little cotton gin is heard now-a-days.

☞Wilmington, N. C., stores are closed because the clerks have struck.

☞Among the Northern arrivals are Rev. THOMAS STECK and wife of Pennsylvania.

☞C. W. SMITH Esq., and wife, and Mrs. MELLICK have returned from their Northern visit.

☞The man who would complain of this weather, would be disatisfied if he was to be hung.

☞A bank-note machine, worth nearly $1,000,000, has gone West, bound for Japan.

☞There are in Belgium two hundred and five newspapers, and in Holland one hundred and thirty.

☞Iron grave-stones are much used in Texas, and are very popular with all who have tried them.

☞Hon. WM. H. SEWARD, and Mrs. SARAH PAYSON PARTON ("Fanny Fern") both died on Thursday of last week.

☞Professor TYLER, of Michigan University, is lecturing on English literature to the convicts of the prison in that State.

☞ANTON RUHINSTEIN, the great pianst, was at one time so poor in Vienna that he had to give music lessons at half a florin each.

☞Our Merchants are receiving their fall and winter stock of goods, and the wants of all can be supplied without going out of town.

☞The Annual Conference of the African M. E. Z. Church convened at Hertford on Wednesday Oct. 16th. Bishop HOOD presiding,

☞The Star says "mosquitoes were ninety-eight in the shade last evening." A New Jerseman says he has known them to be more than two thousand in the dark.

☞O. E. DALTON, who served his country through the war without receiving a scratch, choked to death on fried beef at Evansville a few days ago.

☞OLIVER DALRYMPLE, whose little farm is near St. Paul, Minn., has this season harvested 45,000 bushels of wheat and banked $47,250 for it.

☞The Constitutionalist says the behavior of the negroes in Augusta during the election was admirable. They were orderly and respectful.

☞"The toilers" of the River and Sound, now frequent our shores, and do most congregate down along the wharfs. They bring with them a goodly supply of fall fish.

☞A married man, with a large family, recently ran off with a neighbor's daughter in Iowa. A Western paper says a father and a shot-gun are in pursuit.

☞WILLIAM THOMAS CAMP was not hanged in Indiana last Friday, a respite having postponed the show until November 22. The disappointment of the crowd that had gathered to see him strangled was touching in the extreme.

☞M. T. BRODERICK Esq., of Havana, N. Y., arrived in town by Saturday's boat. We understand there is some prospect of his identifying himself with the business interests of our town. We hope this will become a fact, for such men as Mr. BRODERICK, are the men Elizabeth City needs.

☞We understand that while Capt. LYON of this place was in Philadelphia recently, he obtained from Dr. KORCHING the great Indian Doctor, a specific remedy for piles, and also for corns and bunions. The Captain will at once commence and prepare large quantities of these remedies which he will keep for sale to the afflicted.

☞Lost or mislaid—a small Political Organization. Said organization was, with great difficulty, born a few weeks ago, and was christened "The Pasquotank County Democratic Liberal Republican Greeley and Brown Club." Always feeble from its birth, it is feared that its name has been too much for it. Anybody finding the carcass are requested to bury it out of sight, so as to get rid of the stink.

☞The Roanoke and Tar River Agricultural Fair commences at Weldon N. C. Oct. 29th; and this reminds us that we have received a kind invitation to attend the "Grand Coronation Ball" at the "Emry House" in that place on Friday November 1st, it being the last day of said fair—much obliged—It makes us feel like "stubbing our light fantastic toe" a little. May the fair and the ball, be patronized as they deserve.

☞President THEIRS has issued orders that the present Monsieur de Paris (the French executioner) shall henceforth abstain from the ostentations and almost theatrical displays he has been making recently in traveling about with his "improved" guillotine.

☞HERR JOHANN STRAUSS, according to the Jenkins of the Vienna Tageblatt, has taken home with him from this country the American habit of chewing tobacco. He says it was recommended him in the United States as a good remedy for the toothache.

☞From Omaha comes a horrible story about a dead man, J. T. WEAVER by name, who was sent East in a cask of spirits from Ogden. Certain railroad employes, ignorant of what was inside the cask, bored a hole in it and drank liberally of the liquor. They have not been heard from since the discovery.

☞While the CZAR ALEXANDER was on his recent visit to Berlin the Minister of War at St. Petersburg, by his direction, took an important step which indicates grave apprehensions as to the future. He ordered the beginning of the "mobilization" exercises of the Russian army, and the instant assembling of the reserves.

☞Listen to this now. We always supposed that cologne was made "way down" in Old Cologna, but we were mistaken; it is made in E. City, N. C., we know it because we have been presented with a bottle of it, by Dr. D. T. KREBS & Co. We return them our thanks; it makes us smell real nice and fragrant. The Cologne, like all the rest of their large stock of Druggists goods, is first class.

☞We have taken a little look into Mr. WEISEL'S new store on Water Street. Our space forbids an extended notice of the building; you must go and see it for yourself. The building is a two story brick, with tin roof. The store room is 28 x 75 feet finished in white. The Cashier's desk, and the private office are in the rear of the store, and are tastily designed. The front of the store building is glass, there being two large solid panes each 74 x 98 inches, beside the large transom light over the door, the second story, and ell of the building will be occupied by Mr. WEISEL for a dwelling, and is finely finished. The whole building inside and outside is fine, and is an ornament to the City. Mr. WEISEL informs us that he shall soon have one of the largest, finest, and the best stock of goods ever brought into E. City, and he is a man who doesn't calculate to go back on his word. Go and see the new store and the new goods.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Inquiriendo.—A "tidal wave," is a concern of Democratic build, which was originally designed to destroy the Republican Party, but not understanding its business, and thinking (water style,) that it was to be used as a purifier, it "went for" the dirtiest mass, and swept them almost out of existance. This occured in Pennsylvania, and Ohio, on the Eighth of the present month. For the particulars—inquire of our this weeks Rooster.

Scientifi-cus.—The tide ebbs and flows because it can't help it. Other people may give you other reasons, but this is correct. These are the facts. The tide was born poor and an orphan, and was bound out to her uncle—the "man in the moon," who at ones set her running on errands between the sea and land. She has to do this twice a day. The tide we have here, is called a "wind tide," and is a half sister to a Democratic "tidal wave."

Quesetoner.—You are mistaken about the meaning of the term. An Economist is one in whom his Maker, for some inscrutible reason, has used great Economy (that is, dealt sparingly) in his donation of brains. It is hard to explain such dealings except on the ground that to be more liberal, would be to "cast pearls before swine."

Poetess.—The "little lamb" story commences thus——

Mary had a little lamb,
Its tail curled up behind it,
And when that lamb would run away,
She had hard work to find it.

OLD THINGS HAVE PASSED AWAY.—This is at least true of the old method of treating the long abused and much abused human body. It is no longer considered wise to put a patient to the torture in order to cure him of a disease in which pain is already undermining the energies of his system, True science ranges itself on the side of nature, and endeavors to assist her in her fight against disease. This is the province of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the most approved tonic ever advertised in this country. It may be recommended as a fall medicine, par excellence; for it is in the fall that biliousness, dyspepsia and malarious fevers are especially prevalent. The frame, exhausted by the heats of summer, is relaxed and feeble at its close, and requires, we may say demands artificial assistance. Afford it that assistance in occasional doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and the evils referred to may be escaped. Throughout the far West, and on the steaming alluvial of the Southern rivers, all the varieties of periodical fever are probably rife to day. Had a course of Hostetter's Bitters been commenced by the sufferers a month ago, i. e., before the unhealthy season set in, even-eighths of them would in all probability be in their usual health at the present time. So much for want of forecaste. So much for not keeping in the house, and using daily, the best safeguard against epidemic and endemic fevers.

As flocks of imposters and imitators are trying to follow in the wake of the great American remedy, therefore be sure that the article you buy is genuine and verified by the proper trade-marks. The true article can only be obtained in bottles. Beware of the spurious bitters sold by the gallon or in keg.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, sept, 4, 1872.

Dr. Wm. H. Tutt:

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to you and to suffering humanity to make public the great merits of your Extract Sarsaparilla and Queen's Delight. For years I have been a great sufferer, my general health broke down, and I was affected with nervousness of the most terrible character, which was soon followed by an eruption all over the body, forming large ulcers in some places, and attended with rheumatic pains. Tongue cannot describe my sufferihg. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and had a perfect loathing of food. I was attended by several physicians, who rendered me no relief, I despaired of ever being well again, but thanks to a kind Providence I accidentally heard of your medicine. I sent for half a dozen bottles, and before I had taken three I began to feel better. My appetite improved, and the rheumatic pains became less severe, and I could enjoy sleep. I have continued its use and have taken eleven bottles, and believe I am a sound man again. The ulcers have all healed, my skin is smooth and healthy, and I have gained 22 pounds in weight. I believe my sickness resulted from a taint of scrofula. I would earnestly recommend your compound to my fellow sufferers.

With keep gratitude to you
I am ever your friend,
JAS. FRANKLIN.

AGRICULTURAL, HORTICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC MATTERS.

Sports at the old English Fairs.

The boys who read the NORTH CAROLINIAN will be much amused at the account we are going to give of some of the customs and sports at the Fairs in England in former times. Besides the common sports of wrestling, boxing, racing, jumping, and cock-fighting, there were other games that the men, women and boys took delight in at the old country fairs in England. We will describe some of them.

In those days the people were robust and strong, and they were pleased with rough and severe sports. But they were such as must have afforded capital fun for the spectators—especially for the boys.

One of these rustic sports was: Climbing the greasy pole for a leg of bacon. On the top of a high, small, greased pole, a leg of bacon was stuck. Any one who could climb up and take off the bacon was to have it as a prize. This was a laughable sport. For a climber might, perhaps, get near the top of the pole and be able to hold himself there by both hands. But the moment he raised one hand to unfasten the bacon, he would be almost sure to slide down again in pretty quick time, bearing all below him, who were foolish enough to climb after him, to the ground in a heap.

Another of these sports was: The old women drinking hot tea for a pound of snuff. Whoever could drink the most and the hottest tea in one hour gained the prize.

Another amusement was: Grinning through horse collars. Several men would stand in a row, each holding a collar. Men and women as many as pleased to do so, would in turn look through the collars making up the worst faces they could The one who made up the ugliest face gained the prize.

Sometimes they had this game also: Thirty old women racing for a pound of tea. This occasioned much merriment, and it was astonishing to see with what agility the old dames would run to obtain that they loved so much.

Another of these sports which must have created much mirth, was: Hunting the pig with a soaped tail. Grunter, with his tail well greased or soaped, was set off at the foot of a hill, and was quickly pursued by men and boys. Whoever caught him by the tail and could hold him still with that one hand for three minutes was to have the pig for his own. But it was rather slippery business to catch the smooth porker. For pigs then had the same obstinate nature that they inherit now, and on being pulled one way they strove to go an opposite direction. If some lucky fellow happened to grasp the pig by the tail, it was next to impossible for him to keep his hold. Grunter would go forward if he was pulled back. Just as the pig of the London butcher did. The butcher laid a wager with a waterman on the Thames that he would make a pig run over one of the bridges quicker than the waterman could row his boat across the river. The bet was eagerly accepted by the waterman. When the signal for starting was given, the boatman began to row with all his might. But the butcher, catching hold of the tail of the pig, endeavored to pull him back, upon which grunter, true to his nature, pulled forward and in post-haste scampered over the bridge, pulling the butcher after him, who arrived on the opposite side before the poor watchman reached the bank.

We must speak of one more of the rustic sports at the old fairs in England: Jumping in sacks for cheese. Ten or twelve of the best jumpers were chosen to contend for the prize. They were tied in long sacks or bags up to their necks, their heads only being out of the bags. They were to jump six hundred yards. The one who would first jump to the goal, carried off the cheese. Sometimes one would jump so far as to lose his balance and fall, and his fall, like bricks in a row would generally occasion the downfall of three or four others, to their great vexation, but to the supreme amusement of the spectators. But after a time some one being more expert or more lucky than the rest, would reach the bound and claim the prize.

Oxenbridge and Cannon were two noted fighters formerly in Wiltshire. Cannon, not daring to contend in a boxing match with Oxenbridge, challenged him to jump in sacks for a cheese. It was agreed that they were to jump over the course (which was five hundred yards long) three times. The first time Cannon fell, his opponent winning the race. The second time Oxenbridge fell and Cannon beat. The third time they kept a pretty even pace, for about four hundred yards, when they bounded against each other and both fell. Then there was a dispute as to who was the victor. Oxenbridge wished to divide the cheese. Cannon wanted to jump again. But while disputing, Cannon got out of his sack and ran off with the cheese, Oxenbridge was soon after him. They soon set to at a boxing match. In two hours Cannon became the victor and carried off the cheese in triumph.

There were the sports of rustic, uncultivated people. It is well thay have passed away. They are too cruel or too coarse to be practiced in our day. We should be glad that they have been given up just as the ancient gladiatorical fights have been. Perhaps we shall give the readers of the NORTH CNROLINIAN an account some time of the ancient games and gladiatorial sports. But we should be glad that those games have passed away as well as those coarse sports of which we have given an account. It is right that all should have some amusemsnts, particularly the young. But the sports should not be gross nor cruel. They should be healthful, humane and refined in their influence.

Tea Culture in North Carolina.

A correspondent of the Wilmington (N. C.) Journal states that his brother has raised plants and cured tea which cannot be excelled in flavor by any imported tea These plants were obtained before the rebellion from the Agricultural Bureau of the Patent Office. The number of plants has been constantly increased by planting each year all the seed realized. The later plants are fully equaled to those first planted. The tea culture in this county was commenced by Mr. Junius Smith of South Carolina as early as 1848. It has proved both hardly and productive, bearing uninjured extremes of temperature very destructive to some of our native plants. Mr. Campbell, in Tennessee, has also succeeded very well with the plant. There is no reason why it should not be successful over a large portion of our country. The tea plant is a beautifull evergreen, and will make a desirable ornamental shrub for door-yards and gardens. In this way its culture may be gradually extended until it becomes a staple crop in this country, which offers as many advantages for its growth, at least, as China.

A bachelor having the blues imagined he was sick, and his physician prescribed for him. The druggest translated it: "Twenty-seven yards of silk, with a woman in it."

OF VALUABLE

NORTH CAROLINA LANDS,

FOR SALE BY

GEORGE D. POOL.

Real Estate Agent,

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

In presenting my list of lands and other properties for sale, I would say that no section of the United States offers such inducements for capitalisis and emigrants, as this section of North Carolina. In longevity and healthfulness, it will compare favorably with any where: and in easy and cheap transportation of products to market, in pleasantness of climate, in the sociability of the people, in great fertility, and durability of soil, no section can equal it.

A railroad will soon be built to Weldon, putting this place in direct communication by Rail, with the whole United States. This, together with our great fishing. farming and manufacturing interests, and certain early completion of already projected works of improvement for putting in nearer, cheaper and easier communication with the Ocean, will render this one of the most important commercial, and manufacturing points on the Southern country.

A Steam Saw and Grist Mill in the town of Nixonton 8 miles from E. City. This Mill has a fine wharf and store attached on deep navigable water, the engine is 40 horse power, and all in good order. It is one of the finest locations to be found any where for custom work, and for getting good saw logs easily and cheaply. Price $4,000 cash.

Adjoining the mill property is 40 acres of fine land on the River, with three houses. all for $1200. Near the same is a good two story dwelling and 13 acres of land for $2.000, and a good one story dwelling, with one acre of land for $300.

Also two fine farms in Pasquotauk county, 10 miles from E. City, within half mile of church. school house and post office. One tract contains about 400 acres, with fair buildings and mostly cleared, and the other contains 300 acres, with good two story dwelling, large barn, and other outhouses, both are offered at $20 per acre, one third cash, balance in one and two years.

Also one other tract in Pasquotank county, containing 116 acres, within one mile of the town with fine buildings, mostly cleared and in cultivation. Price $25 per acre, one half cash, balance in 12 months.

A valuable site for a hotel at Nag's Head, 40 miles from Elizabeth City, and 50 miles from Edenton. This is situated immediately on the Ocean, and is a famous Summer resort for invalids, and those seeking health, comfort, and amusements during the summer months. It is in direct communication by steamboats and railroad with all parts of North Carolina, Virginia, and the North; and is equal in natural advantages to Newport, or Cape May. Visitors flock to this famous summer resort by hundreds and thousands, and a large amount of money can be made by a hotel. A charter has been obtained from the Legislature of N. C., for a joint stock company to build the hotel. There is now an old hotel on the spot, which could be cheaply repaired and bought for $3.000. This hotel, though imperfectly kept, cleared the proprietor last season, over $3.000. For a man or a company, having some capital, this is one of the finest chances to make money at hotel keeping to be found anywhere. The early attention of the public is invited to this property.

A fine steam saw and grist mill at Hertford, the county seat of Perquimans County, N. C., 18 miles from Elizabeth City. This mill has a fifty horse power engine, now in good running, two pairs of best French burr stones, and two upright saws. The house has a brick basement, and the building is large and in good order. There is one and a half acres of land belonging to this property, and a good two story dwelling, and other out-houses. The section of country adjacent abounds in the finest yellow pine, cypress, ash, poplar, and other valuable timber. This property originally cost $15.000, and is now offered at forced sale for the low price of $8.500, $7.00, cash, and the balance in six equal instalments, six months apart each with interest.

A fine farm and fishery in same county. The farm contains 400 acres of the finest land, lies immediately on Albemarle Sound where the water is 12 miles wide, and 18 to 20 feet deep, has got buildings, and fine neighborhood. The fishery is on the farm and goes with it. It has a new seine 2,500 yards long, and all the necessary boats, buildings, &c., (which cost over $15,000 two years ago.) The fishery alone, of a good season, will make from 5 to $10,000 profit to the owner. This property is offered at forced sale for the low price of $20,000, $7,000 cash, balance on easy times.

A store at South Mills, in Camden county, 20 miles from E. City, and 20 miles from Norfolk, lying on the canal where steamers pass daily. A fine chance for merchandize. Store is large with dwelling above containing six rooms, is in first rate order, has office, kitchen, dairy, and other necessary outhouses. Goods to the amt. of $50,000 per annum can be sold here, and at large profits. A splended stand for a country retail store. Price $2,500—one third cash, balance in one and two years.

A valuable tract of land in Camden county, at South Mills, on the Dismal Swamp Canal, lying on the canal for two miles, containing over 900 acres of land—two-thirds cleared, and in a fine state of cultivation, with good buildings, &c.; balance in valuable timber. Price $12,000, one-third cash, balance in one and two years, interest from January, 1871. This is a valuable farm for corn, wheat, and vegetables, and being midway between Elizabeth City and Norfolk, and located where steamers pass by the door daily, is a desirable and cheap property.

A fine farm of 600 acres within six miles of E. City, one mile from navigable water, and the best cotton farm in the State. It is also well adapted to raising corn and wheat. This farm has a splended two-story dwelling upon it, large barn, 40 by 60 feet, a large number of outhouses, by splended trees and shrubbery, is in a strong Union neighborhood, and altogether the most desirable place in the county. A little over one-half of this land is cleared, and the balance is covered with the finest yellow pine, poplar, ash and other timber. Price $30 per acre—one-third cash, balance in one and two years with interest. Title reserved.

Sixteen houses and lots in Elizabeth City, with good dwellings, out-houses, &c. Prices and terms reasonable.

A valuable farm in Perquimans county, N. C. near navigable water. Has a fine dwelling-house with ten rooms, in splended order, with splended barns and stables—all in first rate order. The farm is very productive in corn, oats, wheat, cotton and clover. It is one of the finest farms in the State and is now in good cultivation, contains 585 acres of land, about three-fourths cleared and under cultivation. Price $10,000, one-third cash January 1, next balance in two equal annual instalments with interest at the rate of six per cent.

A farm of 370 acres 8 miles from town by water, and 12 miles by land, is offered for sale for $10,000 in easy payments. This tract of land lies immediately on the River which is 4 miles wide and washes the farm its whole length on one side, and a branch of the River one mile wide, binds it on one end. The land is well adapted to raising corn, wheat, cotton, oats, peas, &c., lies high and dry, and is susceptible of the highest improvement. Fronting and looking over, as it does, two large sheets of navigable water, where steamers and sailing vessels are constantly passing, carrying freight and passengers to all parts of the country, its location and surroundings, are of the most fascinating and desirable character. There is a fishery on it ready for working a seine 2,500 yards long, and which commands a portion of both streams of water, and can be made immensely profitable. The price charged is low, and the purchase a very desirable one. The buildings consist of a good two-story dwelling and out-houses.

A desirable house and lot in the town of Elizabeth City on the corner of two principal streets, the principal one, and situated in the best business locality in the town. The lot contains about two acres of land, and the buildings consist of a fair dwelling three stories high, containing eight rooms, all in good order, another two story building with four rooms and pantries, dairy, smokehouses, stables, &c. The dwelling has a good cellar under it. There is room on the front lot to erect two good stores, and they would occupy the best stand in the town for merchandize.

A Farm of 200 acres within one mile of Elizabeth City, with good two story dwelling, large barn and stables, and all necessary outhouses, orchard of fine fruit trees, and a large number of ornamental trees and shrubbery around dwelling. This farm is on one of the most public roads in the County—is in a high state of cultivation—has fine and durable fences, &c. Altogether, it is the richest land and most desirable location, anywhere in the neighborhood of the town. Price $6000—one-half cash, balance in easy payments.

Patented July 23d, 1872.

A FARINACEOUS FOOD FOR INVALIDS AND INFANTS.

By the peculiar process in which this preparation is made, all the flesh forming constituents—EARTHY and SALINE elements of the grain are retained, with none of the STARCH, all of which being converted into Dextrine.

It is believed by the most intelligent men that much of the suffering, sickness and mortality of mankind is traceable to deficient or faulty nutrition. The same cause may also be assigned the frequent disapointment of physicians in the result of the action of most approved remedies.

We feel sure that this article will supply the deficiency.

What Horace Greeley Thinks of the Democratic Party.

EXTRACTS, RICH, RARE AND RACY.

Now that Mr. Greeley has become the leader of the Democracy, we present the following extracts from editorials of the New York Tribune, writen by Mr. Greeley during the forty years of his editorial life. They are refreshing, and will not nauseate Democrats who have lost all self-respect,—forsaken principle in their hunt for office,—and become first-class dirt-eaters. The extracts are as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE DISEASE.

"Mr. Webster was not only a gentleman, but he had the elements of moral greatness; and he had his faults as well. He failed only in one respect; and in this respect I differ from him—he wanted to be President, and I don't.—Horace Greeley, in 1868.

OUR GREATEST MAN.

"We have seen our greatest man, Mr. Chase, making the same blunder. I have seen men who had the disease early, and died of it at a very old age."—Horace Geeley, in 1868.

THE FATE OF GEN. CASS.

"Gen. Lewis Cass died at 82, and up to the day of his death he wanted to be President. No one ever escapes who catches the disease: he lives and dies in the delusion. Being a reader and an observer at an early age, I saw how it poisoned and paralyzed the best of our public men, and have carefully avoided it."—Horace Greeley, in 1866.

THE GOOD SENSE OF GEN. GRANT.

"We, at least, in our day, have a President-elect who did not try to be President. He was elected mainly on that account."—Horace Greele r, in 1868.

THE ENEMY OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

"If the Democratic party were called upon to decide between Grant and myself, I know that their regard for what they must call principle would induce nine-tenths of them to vote against me. Why? I am a decided enemy of that party, even in its most respectable aspects."—Horace Greeley, in 1871.

PICTURES OF THE DEMOCRACY.

"Every one who chooses to live by pugilism or gambling or harlotry, with nearly every keeper of a tippling house, is politically a Democrat."—Horace Greeley.

IGNORANCE A DEMOCRATIC ALLY.

"If there were not a newspaper or a common school in the country, the Democratic party would be far stronger than it is."—Horace Greeley.

DEMOCRATIC ESSENTIALS.

"The essential articles of the Democratic creed [are] 'love rum and hate niggers.' The less one learns and knows, the more certain he is to vote the regular ticket from A to izzard."—Horace Greeley.

WHO ARE DEMOCRATS.

"We thereupon asked our contemporary to state frankly whether the pugilists, blacklegs, thieves, burglars, keepers of dens of prostitution, etc., etc., * * * were not almost unanimously Democrats."—Horace Greeley.

DEMOCRATIC VIRTUES.

"To smoke is a Democratic virtue; to chew is that virtue intensified; to drink rum is that virtue in the superlative."—Horace Greeley.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATS'

"Point wherever you please to an election district which you will pronounce morally rotten, given up in great part to debauchery and vice; where voters subsist mainly by keeping policy-offices, gambling houses, grog-shops and darker dens of infamy, and that district will be found at nearly or quite every election giving a majority for that which styles itself 'the Democratic party.' Take all the haunts of debauchery in the land, and you will find nine tenths of their master spirits active partisans of that same Democracy. What is the instinct, the sympathetic chord, which attaches them so uniformly to this party? Will you consider?"—Horace Greeley.

REBEL DEMOCRACY.

"The brain, the heart, the soul of the present Democratic party is the rebel element at the South, with its Northern allies and simpathisers. It is rebel at the core to-day. It would come into power with the hate, the chagrin, the wrath, the mortification of ten bitter years to impel and guide its steps. It would devote itself to taking off or reducing tax after tax until the Treasury was deprived of the means of paying interest on the national debt, and would hail the tidings of national bankruptcy with unalloyed gladness and unconcealed exultation. Whatever chastisement may be deserved by our national sins, we must hope that this disgrace and humiliation will be spared us."—Horace Greely.

THE FEROCIOUS PROTECTICNIST."

"You only err as to the proper candidate. I am not the man you need. Your party is modestly Free Trade, and I am a ferocious Protectionist. I have no doubt that I might be nominated and elected by your help but it would place us all in a false position."—Horace Greeley to P. Donan, in 1871.

"THE BAYNOT LAW OF 1870"

"It is urged by the Democratic organs that the law is to be enforced in State and municipal elections. This is done to make it more obnoxions, if that be possible, to their party. But, unfortunately, this is an error. The law applies only to presidential and congressional election, though we heartily wish it could be made to apply to all others."—Horace Greeley.

THE KU KLUX LAW.

"I hold our Government bound by its duty of protecting our citizens in their fundamental rights, to pass and enforce laws for the extirpation of the excrable Ku Klux conspiricy; and, if it has not the power to do it, then I say our Government is no government, but a sham. I, therefore, on every proper occasion, advocated and justified the Ku Klux Act. I hold it especially desirable for the South; and, if it does not prove strong enough to effect its pourpose, I hope it will be made stronger and stronger."—Horace Greely in 1872!

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S LINEL SUCCESSOR.

"Many will be surprised at the President's hearty endorsement of civil service reform [in his message of 1870;] but he has been there all along. The President's summing up of the leading objects of his policy, and especially his desire to secure a pure and untrameled vote, must appeal cogently to the judgment and affections of the American people. He is Abraham Lincoln's lineal successor; and the popular heart beats in unison with his administration and his efforts. —Horace Greeley in 1870.

"The great Gorilla of the Democracy is filling the air with his demonical howling, and beating his breast like a tremendous drum, to express his savage joy over the first full meal he has had after years of enforced abstinence. Eat your fill now, Gorilla, for you will never have another chance!"—Tribune, Nov. 11th, 1867.
